Living Culture – Aleatory Living in My Life (1869-74)

By Karl Marx

I. Small Journeys (Reminiscing about the process of my life, how I join it to meetings and even a style of philosophy which I call meticulous and materialist)
II. Long Journeys (Writing being reflected on)

I. At My Office – in A London Inn (Working a lot on manuscripts, to be divined without Hegel or with)
II. Writing and Reflecting in A London Inn

I mean just keep writing and reflecting. It has to be aleatory though. It has to be like a discovery. Something like coinage in Southern Italian towns in 1878.

I mean just be aleatory. How to be aleatory is just to be into in fact the more musical Wagner. I also mean to leave the house a lot, which Engels recommends a lot. We keep leaving the house and smoking and joking, we also in fact go to other Inns and other Innsbrucks and shops at night and drink coffee and smoke a lot.
